THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1930

The Arab is usually as willing as the Jew to use modern methods and inventions; his trouble is that he lacks the capital and the organization. The Moslem or Christian Arab small farmer, often the tenant of a mortgagee or absentee landlord, cannot be blamed for his failure to compete as a cultivator with the Jewish immigrant, who at the worst has a rich, strong and intelligent organization behind him.

The Rockefeller $250,000,000 "radio city" in New York, with its 60-story building covering three blocks including four theaters having a seating capacity of more than 12,000, is expected to do much toward promoting all the arts in the range of electrical entertainment. It also will have to do much toward promoting solution of the traffic problem.

Denmark scraps two centuries, her whole navy, thus putting her on a parity with Switzerland, Bolivia and Paraguay. This is in marked contrast to a thousand years ago, when Danish warships were running in and out of every inlet in Europe. The ancient Vikings, wherever they are, would be sick at heart at this news.

Nine hundred tons of dust, ash and tar settle on a square mile of New-castle-on-Tyne every year, giving that city the reputation of being England's smokiest. No wonder we're always told that Newcastle is the place you shouldn't carry coals to.

THIRTY-SIX THOUSAND LIVES

The United States is on its way toward setting a new high record for deaths due to the automobile, according to a well known authority. It is forecast that at the end of 1930 the total of casualties will be 36,000 several thousand more than were killed last year, when the present record was established.

It is believed that the cause of the increase in automobile accidents is still the modern "rules of the road." Hundreds of thousands of motorists are confused and lost in the public highways.

This last factor that is responsible for our gigantic record of fatalities, this new state of affairs, requires strict enforcement of applicable laws, for the increase in accidents is a direct result of the fact that the nation and when every state has and enforces them at least partial success in accident prevention will be achieved.

Another crying need, in most states, is for modernization and revision of traffic ordinances. Up to date, enforceable codes that would be supported by the public, are essential to highway safety.

We have no more serious problem than that of automobile accident prevention. It affects every citizen and is a vital element in the life of every community.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE

San likewise. Claiming no ability and no right to act apart from God, Jesus watched, worked, and prayed to do his Father's will. He listened to the voice of God, and carried out its purposes of God. Consequently Jesus had behind him supporting him in his work, all the wisdom and power there is, the might and wisdom of the one and only cause, the eternal Supreme Being. Consequently his success was natural, inevitable, and uniform.

What an example the Master has furnished. How deeply we should ponder this lesson he has taught. People generally believe that man can be separated from God, when the fact is that immortal man can never for a moment be separated from his Maker. Mortals are inclined to think of themselves as soul-gods, as finite entities, each one traveling along an orbit of his own devising, each one possessed of a mind of his own, with a will, a way, and a righteousness of his own. From this misconception of being arise the strife and the burden of human existence. In reality, God is the one infinite Mind, which governs, sustains, and blesses all men; and all men have the same Mind as surely as they have the same God. Jesus knew the strength, the freedom, and the peace which come of recognizing man's complete dependence upon God, and the perfect unity and accord which exist between God and man made in God's image. He knew that the burden of human life will roll away as people admit and act upon the divine facts. Hence his compassionate appeal to all mankind: "Come unto me, and ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

COEXISTENCE

Immortal man coexists with God and the universe. Whatever is immortal is without beginning and without end. Only mortality begins, and only mortality ends. Spiritual man, made in the image and likeness of God, neither begins nor ends. God is the eternal Cause, and by definition, cause is that which produces effect. Since God always has been the one cause, God must always have produced, and must forever continue to produce the infinite eternal effect, spiritual man and the spiritual universe. Jesus always recognized himself as without beginning and without end. Referring to his true spiritual self, and contrasting it with the human personality, or human concept, of the world began. "Before Abraham was, I am." In a similar way, he referred to the eternal glory which he enjoyed with his Father before the material theory, or human concept, of the world began.

Everything that God produces coexists with God. Everything that He produces, and always has been, essential to Him, otherwise it would not exist. God, the infinite Mind, could not entertain any temporary concept, belief, or thought. His every thought must be perfect and eternal. The Bible clearly teaches that God's infinite creation is perfect, and that it completely satisfies Him. How could it be otherwise? If there existed a perfect nothing, it would contain not a single necessary line, nor any necessary concept of color. None of course there is not such thing as a perfect nothing. But God is the perfect artist, and His creation is His perfect work. There is all exact, and there is no fault to be found; each thing has its own particular place in the divine, eternal order. God is forever conscious of His entire creation, and He forever holds lights in all that He beholds. If God could forget any detail of His creation, that moment it would cease to be; for everything that actual existence exists as an idea in God, the divine Mind. What a comfort it is to know that now, in our true spiritual being, we are sons of God, and that God is satisfied with all His children as He knows them, and that He never forgets one of them for a moment. Jesus impressed this

"Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows."

God's Man Is Indestructible
Man in God's image is indestructible. Jesus taught and proved this eternal fact. Jesus presented his teaching, by precept and example, to his twelve disciples, whom he carefully prepared for every phase and aspect of their work. Knowing that they would be subjected to the same bitter persecution which was meted out to him, and which later culminated in his crucifixion, he carefully instructed them in that regard. He told them that they would be arrested, brought before the magistrates, and cast into prison. He said the time would even come when those who attempted to kill them would actually believe they were rendering God a service. Yet to this same group of men he said, "There shall not a hair of your head perish." How clearly this statement illustrates the line of distinction which the Master drew between the human corporeal personality, and the eternal indestructible spiritual individuality of man. What comfort there is for every one of us in that great truth, which Jesus set forth that not one jot of good, not one iota of what constitutes real being, your real being, or mine, or any one else's, can ever be lost or destroyed. Because he knew that the true being of man can never be destroyed, nor in any way injured or changed, Jesus dared to say to those who persecuted him, "Destroy this temple (meaning his human body), and in three days I will raise it up again. And just that he did. By his crucifixion and resurrection, Jesus not only proved that man in God's image is indestructible, but he also established the fact that a human being may comprehend the indestructibility of God's man sufficiently to protect himself from all the attacks of error as, step by step, he advances towards that stage of spiritual growth where mortality forever disappears, "swallowed up of life."

God, being the ever-living God, the man whom God creates is the ever-living man. People think of life as a span, with birth at one end and death at the other. But that concept of life is only an ignorant misconception, which bears no resemblance to real life. Real life is by its very nature eternal, without beginning and without end. God is Life, existing at the standpoint of causation, and producing only eternal life at the standpoint of effect. The individual spiritual man is an eternal manifestation or expression of infinite life. Only what is life-giving and eternal can enter the consciousness of man made in God's image and likeness. Commenting on the crucifixion and resurrection of the great Master, Mrs. Eddy makes this statement on page fifty-one of Science and Health: "Jesus could give his temporal life into his enemies' hands; but when his earthly mission was accomplished, his spiritual life, indestructible and eternal, was found forever the same. He knew that matter had no life and that real life is God; therefore he could no more be separated from his spiritual life than God could be extinguished."

SEEKS TREASURE HIDDEN IN TEMPLE

Party to Hunt for Mayan Ruin in Guatemala.

London—Treasure hidden in a ruined temple is the prize which Dr. Thomas Gann, the archeologist, is organizing an expedition to discover in the Peten district of Guatemala.

The treasure temple, hidden for centuries in the depths of forest and swamp, has until now been little more than a legend of buried gold handed down by generations of Maya Indians; but Doctor Gann believes he knows the site of the ruin and is waiting for permission of the Guatemalan government to explore and investigate.

Old stories are told by the Maya Indians of a sealed temple by a lagoon, the doors of which are never open save one day of the year. Then the most courageous Indians are sold to carry their offerings of wild turkey and corn into the temple and lay them on the altar stones and retire from the ruin to pray. When they return the offerings are gone, and for each man in his place is a miraculous pile of gold.

Some say that here lies buried the lost treasure of Montezuma, the last of the emperors of Mexico.

An Englishman, John Carmichael, all but stumbled on the temple in 1887, when he was commanding a small force in defense of the British Honduras frontier, against the raiding Indians.

Two Peten Indians gave him gold ornaments of great age which they had found in the swamps. Carmichael died in the search for the temple. Doctor Gann has led two expeditions in search of the buried treasure.

Mesozoic Monster's Hide for Washington Museum

Seaward, Alaska.—A piece of leather four feet square, two inches thick and like armorplate is being prepared for shipment to the University of Washington museum. It is probably the oldest bit of leather in the world.

The patch of hide belonged to a prehistoric lizard that roamed the desolate hills of Alaska and whose teeth finally became food for bears. It was discovered in a landslide on Look Inlet by Herman Burkhardt, Los Angeles banker, and his guide, Russell Annet of Anchorage. The creature measured 60 feet long, with a skull 33 inches long.

A piece of its hide and portions of flesh remained where the giant saurian had been overwhelmed by glacier ice in the tundra shales. Such lizards had 40 teeth, each weighing 10 ounces, and ribs five feet long.

The last recorded discovery of a prehistoric creature in Alaska was in 1902 near Nome, where a mammoth with frozen flesh and hide complete was discovered by a gold miner at the foot of his shaft.

Every spring huge tusks and bones of mammoths and other prehistoric creatures are left uncovered along the Yukon, Kuskokwim and other streams in Alaska, where frost action topples over high embankments or floods ash away cliffs.

Scientists have been awaiting the discovery of an entire mammoth preserved in the frozen subsoil along the Alaska rivers or near Kotzebue sound, where the finest fossil ivory is abundant.

Chance Discovery Gives Warning of Sandstorms

Paris.—By chance, three scientists discovered a means of warning fishermen, troops and voyagers of approaching sandstorms in ample time to seek shelter.

The scientists erected an anemograph to observe the movements of flying insect hordes through the desert air. One day they detected a peculiar rat-tat-tat noise through the telephone apparatus connected with the instrument. Investigation revealed a sandstorm was rising on the desert. The explorers then produced an improved anemograph, designed expressly to detect approaching sandstorms.
